

Max

Bingo Sun Noon

There are craftsmen who are happy producing numerous copies of a proven design and who delight in knowing that every move they make is appreciated by a user. There are others who prefer to make minor little revisions to proven designs and by doing so, leave their mark on a truly magnificent piece of work. There are still others who drift through the weld shop and wander through the drawing room with no desire to produce anything except the truly bizarre. This bicycle is the product of one such person.

Though originally built to travel easily on public transit, Max has never been used for that. Max has never really been used for anything except to occupy the idle hands and minds of the staff at Robobike.

